How to Detect Lies

Become a Human Lie-Detector (Part 1)

Warning: sometimes ignorance is bliss. After gaining this knowledge, you may be hurt when it is obvious that someone is lying to you. The following deception detection techniques are used by police, forensic psychologists, security experts and other investigators.

Introduction to Detecting Lies:

This knowledge is also useful for managers, employees, and for anyone to use in everyday situations where telling the truth from a lie can help prevent you from being a victim of fraud/scams and other deceptions.

This is just a basic run-down of physical (Body Language), gestures and verbal cues that may indicate someone is being untruthful. Remember, these signs don't indicate someone is lying, just that they are more likely to be lying.

If you got here from somewhere else, be sure to check out our Lie Detection Index page for more info including new research in the field of forensic psychology. Last update: April 10th, 2013.

Signs of Deception!

Body Language of Lies:

- Physical expression will be limited and stiff, with few arm and hand movements. Hand, arm and leg movement are toward their own body the liar takes up less space.
- A person who is lying to you will avoid making eye contact.
- Hands touching their face, throat & mouth. Touching or scratching the neck or behind their ear. Not likely to touch his chest/heart with an open hand.

Emotional Gestures & Contradiction:

- Timing and duration of emotional gestures and situations are off a normal pace. The display of emotion is delayed, stays longer, it would
